Marine Energy Insurance

Introduction:

Marine Energy Insurance is one of the specialized classes of insurance that requires skilled, knowledgeable, and experienced underwriting professionals. It covers operations and assets related to the exploration, extraction, drilling, refining, storage, and transportation of oil, gas, and other energy resources. Additionally, it includes Petrochemical risks, covering assets, operations, and liabilities arising from the production and consumption of intermediate and final chemical products derived from gas and crude petroleum.

This course will equip you with the essential skills needed to place Marine Energy Risks and manage Associated Liabilities effectively.

Who should Attend:

Employees working in the Marine Insurance Division, individuals seeking to enhance their technical expertise in marine energy insurance, and those interested in pursuing Marine Energy Insurance qualifications at the CII Diploma or Associateship levels.

Learning Objectives:

1. Background / History
2. Types of Cover available
3. Underwriting Considerations
4. Construction Risks
5. Operating Risks
